Hundreds of Dinosaur Egg Fossils Found

via Yahoo! NEWS

Researchers in northeastern Spain say they've uncovered hundreds of dinosaur egg fossils, including four kinds that had never been found before in the region. The eggs likely were left behind by sauropods millions of years ago.

Eggs, eggshell fragments and dozens of clutches were nestled in the stratigraphic layers of the Tremp geological formation at the site of Coll de Nargó in the Spanish province of Lleida, which was a marshy region during the Late Cretaceous Period, the researchers said.

"Eggshells, eggs and nests were found in abundance and they all belong to dinosaurs, sauropods in particular," the study's leader, Albert García Sellés from the Miquel Crusafont Catalan Palaeontology Institute, told Spanish news agency SINC this week.

"Up until now, only one type of dinosaur egg had been documented in the region: Megaloolithus siruguei," Sellés added. His team found evidence of at least four other species: Cairanoolithus roussetensis, Megaloolithus aureliensis, Megaloolithus siruguei and Megaloolithus baghensis. Megaloolithus eggs are thought to be associated with sauropods, long-necked dinosaurs that were among some of the largest to roam the planet.

The Coll de Nargó area is considered one of the most important dinosaur nesting areas in Europe, the researchers said, adding that their study shows it was used by several dinosaurs from the Late Campanian age (around 71 million years ago) to the Late Maastrichtian age (around 67 million years ago).

"We had never found so many nests in the one area before. In addition, the presence of various oospecies (eggs species) at the same level suggests that different types of dinosaurs shared the same nesting area," Sellés said, adding that the dinosaur eggs could help scientists determine the date of future findings at the site.

"It has come to light that the different types of eggs are located at very specific time intervals," Sellés explained to SINC. "This allows us to create biochronological scales with a precise dating capacity. In short, thanks to the collection of oospecies found in Coll de Nargó we have been able to determine the age of the site at between 71 and 67 million years."

Stolen Petrified Wood Report

via La Rocks

Well folks, it has happened again. Last night someone tore down the front gate to The Jurupa Mountains Cultural Center, drove in and stole four petrified wood logs that are about 14" in diameter and 24" long.

The center is now having surveillance cameras installed, and on the bright side, we can ID positively all of our pet wood logs. After the last theft, we bought micro chips, drilled into the logs and installed the chips. SOOO Please keep an eye and ear open for someone trying to unload the logs. We can scan them and prove ownership.

It is too bad that some rock hound out there is resulting to this.

Thanks in advance for your watchfulness.
by Otie Braden

Odie. What makes you think it's a rockhound any of the rockhounds I know we're very honest people would never steal something from Anyone it's probably 1 of the drug attics that live around your area.

I would have to concur that as long as we've been in the business of "rocks" we've never known anyone in the history of rockhounds to out right steal from their fellow man, but there is an exception to this rule; We've known thieves like Nevada Turquoise Company out of Albuquerque New Mexico to come to California to rip-off the public for years, selling pure magnisite to the public at gemshows here in California [us being just one of the victims who was ripped off for a few thousand dollars].

Stating for a fact the "magnesite" was Blue Gem, Royston, Fox Mine, Troy, Bonanza, Tortoise Mine. We found out because we went and had 6 different pieces tested at the GIA lab in Carlsbad. Cost us over $400.00 to tell us it was all magnesite.

Owner goes by the name of Fake first name [Shellbone] Williamenski aka Williams. Sold at all the gemshows in California. Finally had to shut his website down due to the law catching up with him. Makes up a story about himself being Ute Indian [found out from his brother that he's Polish and Italian.] A most expert supreme liar. We have recordings.

Back to the petrified wood, that is the "exception to stealing," in a crooked or tricky manner.

Rockhounds to physically take property from another, is a shame and very very sad. Always thought rockhounds had a different type of ethical dignified nature.

I sure hope that is not the case and you are able to find your rocks!

Here are the crime stats in Riverside to give idea to area problems related to "drugs." Just a thought..

Oceanview Gem Mine April 27, 2013

The fieldtrip for April is to the Oceanview Gem Mine. We've been to this mine before and it is a fun trip, where we as friends play in the dirt together. It is an oxymoron in the fact it's good clean fun while you are getting filthy dirty.

Some of what may be found are: Tourmaline, Aquamarine, Spinal, Kunzite, Morganite, Quartz crystals and assorted other things. It is a workout as well.

Please let us know if you are going by April 6th as we are making the reservation on the 7th. We will be passing along maps and the release forms as soon as we get them. You should go to DIGFORGEMS.COM to look at their information about what to bring and what to expect while there. The time we are to meet with Peter our host at 10 a.m. at McGee Rd and Rt. 76. If you have a chance to check out the location on Google it will help you navigate. The cost is $60.00 cash per person which will be collected where we meet as well as the release forms. There is quite a bit of info on the site like what to bring and it will give you an idea of what you'll expect while at the mine.

Our numbers are (626) 914-5030 or (626) 260-7239 to make your reservation to go.

The fieldtrip that was planned for the 20th of April to the rare earth mine run by Molycorp is cancelled. They are in the process of reactivating the mine for production. They won't be ready for tours until January of next year. Perhaps we can reschedule for some time next year.

Looking for the group as I'm the leader

NOC Show Committee Report

by Loretta Ogden, Show Chair

The show committee has decided this year to align our show with the cities plans to bring the traveling Viet Nam Veterans Memorial Wall to La Habra. We are calling the show "The Red, White & Blue Show". We will have a special activity to earn money to support this event.

We think it will be a wonderful way to honor not only La Habras Viet Nam Veterans but all that our country has lost in Military service since then. If you would like to know more about it either call me or it will be announced at the next meeting.

In the month of April, it is important that we have the show plans down pretty pat. We still need people to help at the show.

12. Updates on the Gem show concerning the amount of tickets for printing with the reminder of the Sonora high school Community AG fair on the same weekend as our show and the club providing one raffle ticket to each paying guest to the Ag fair. Each ticket will need to be brought to our show to participate with the raffle which will bring potential customers for our vendors.

The Sonora community fair brought 10,000 people over the three days the fair runs.

Request for the community fair director come speak to the club about their fair and our opportunity to annex with them. Escalated to show committee for review.

Board voted was unanimous to proceed with amending the clubs By Laws to reflect that during our general meetings the board minutes will be read. This change will allow longer speaking times for our speakers and their presentation programs and also allows us more time to introduce our new members including a longer social period.

Our board meeting will take place at a different time to handle the important business of the club. These decisions were taken into consideration due to the separation of business with the responsibilities so the board can concentrate on only club business during those board meetings.

Meeting concluded 7:05 p.m.
